

Concentrated Stock Portfolio

FACTSHEET | 2020 | Q2

INVESTMENT APPROACH

Having a concentrated stock position creates unique circumstances that are largely dependent on your situation. Our objective at ARGI is to provide you options for actively managing your concentrated stock.

By having a customizable strategy we are able to tend to clients' current situational needs and wants. We can apply risk mitigation tactics that potentially cap downside losses. Additionally, income generating techniques can be used to potentially garner extra yield on your stock. Finally, we can offer solutions to strategically exit a position, which is potentially more efficient than simply selling.

Mitigating Risk with Options

Ability to buy downside protection with puts. Can also sell appreciation potential with the intention to generate income from writing calls.

Utilization of Collars

A hybrid strategy that caps appreciation and potentially limits downside participation for little to no out-of-pocket cost. This is a combination of buying and selling options.

Regular Attention

Willingness to Exit the Stock Position

Due to the complexities of the options markets, a client invested in a concentrated stock options strategy must be okay with ultimately exiting the position, even if that is not the primary investment objective.

Knowing the Dangers of an Undiversified Investment

The risks involved in having an undiversified and highly concentrated stock position can be detrimental to retirement savings and total net worth. Substantial losses can occur due to the overexposure to company specific issues and the accompanying volatility. By understanding the risks associated with no asset diversification, the client acknowledges the potential implications associated with this strategy. Through the combined use of the "Key Strategy Attributes", we seek to make calculated maneuvers that are suitable for you and your concentrated stock position.

All investment strategies have the potential for profit or loss. Changes in investment strategies, contributions or withdrawals may cause the performance results of your portfolio to differ materially from the reported composite performance. Different types of investments involve varying degrees of risk, and there can be no assurance that any specific investment will either be suitable or profitable for a client's investment portfolio.

Diversification and asset allocation help you spread risk throughout your portfolio, so investments that do poorly may be balanced by others that do relatively better. Neither diversification nor asset allocation can ensure a profit or protect against a loss.

Economic factors, market conditions, and investment strategies will affect the performance of any portfolio and there are no assurances that it will match or outperform any particular benchmark. ARGI Investment Services (AIS) is registered as an investment advisor with the United States
